

...is produced by the Aviation Preservation Society of Scotland.

APSS organises the volunteer assistance of its members to the Museum of Flight, and conducts some restoration work of its own at the Museum. It has about 120 members, of whom 30 are active at the museum. The APSS is registered in Scotland as a Charity, SC033307

The APSS is independent of the Museum of Flight and this publication does not reflect the policies or opinion of the museum. Similarly, opinions expressed in Fortune Teller are not necessarily those of the Editor, or the Society.

Comments, ideas, draft articles for publication, etc., are welcome and should be sent to the Editor at :

Aviation Preservation Society of Scotland,
c/o Museum of Flight,
East Fortune Airfield,
North Berwick,
East Lothian, EH39 5LF

Or

fortuneteller@apss.org.uk

APSS Membership enquiries should be made to the Membership Secretary at the above address. Our Web site is:

www.apss.org.uk

This journal is for private circulation and is not for sale. While care is taken concerning copyright and no rights are claimed by the APSS, if you have a concern please contact the Editor.

Help and support from the Museum of Flight is gratefully acknowledged.

Contents

Issue 12, Winter 2003/4

Chairman's Chat.	2
Nostalgia Isn't What It Used To Be .	3
Apss Web Site	6
Kirkenes and Petsamo	7
Concorde – Wing Origins ?	11
The Bombing Campaign In Germany	12
Restoration Update	15
A Recollection of my R.A.F. Service	16
Drone Hill Chain Home Radar Station	23
Shorts	28

Note: 2003 AGM minutes are printed centrally as a removable insert.

Editorial Change

When reading this magazine you may notice some changes, hopefully not too quickly. After Editing Fortune Teller since its inception Ian Beattie is finally resting from the task.

Anyone who has tried this knows the effort involved in the process. It starts with sourcing articles and finishes with filling and posting envelopes, just in time to start the next issue.

On behalf of the members I'd like to thank Ian for all his work over the years and hope we can persuade him to submit the occasional article in future.

David Mackenzie
Editor